Colonel Murray Green served on active duty and as a member of the Air Force Reserve. Holding a Ph.D. in history from American University, Colonel Green also served for many years as a senior civilian Air Force historian. During his career, he devoted himself to collecting and assembling the voluminous materials that document the life and accomplishments of General Henry H. "Hap" Arnold. In 1990, with the support of the Academy's Falcon Foundation, Colonel Green deposited his research collection in the Special Collections Branch of the Air Force Academy Library. The product of Colonel Green's magnificent research effort, the "Hap" Arnold – Murray Green Manuscript Collection is an invaluable resource for cadets and scholars pursuing research on General Arnold and the evolution of American airpower.
